GUIDE TO CORPORATE BANKRUPTCY IN ALMERÍA: LIFELINE OR ORDERLY CLOSURE

💬 We live in liquid and accelerated times. In this context, the demand for a written, detailed contract is sometimes perceived as an offense, unnecessary bureaucracy, or a sign of mistrust between gentlemen.

🔒 Nothing could be further from the truth. At MCHM Abogados, we understand the contract as an act of deep respect for the business relationship and the people involved.

A contract is not a weapon to attack; it is an architectural blueprint. When two parties decide to build something together (a company, a project, a lease), they need to know where the foundations are, where the emergency exits are, and who is responsible for maintaining the building.

Without that blueprint, we build on the sand of assumptions. "I thought you would do this," "I believed this was included." Those phrases are the prelude to chaos and breakdown.

The contract is the intellectual effort to anticipate the future. It is sitting down today, when everything is going well and there is goodwill, to decide how we will act if things go wrong tomorrow. It is putting the rules of the game in writing so that, whatever happens, the professional relationship has a secure framework in which to unfold or, if necessary, end in an orderly and trauma-free manner.

Demanding a good contract is not mistrusting. It is being professional.
